Alex James was a runner, like his dad. One day, he collapsed during a run and was hospitalized for five days. He went through lots of tests, but was given a clean bill of health. Then, a month later, he collapsed again, fell into a deep coma, and died. His father wanted to know — what had gone wrong? Dr. John James, a retired toxicologist at NASA, tells the story of how he uncovered the ...

1. Introduction. University teaching techniques are changing as educationalists seek to achieve both quality learning and more effective teaching (Biggs et al., 2011). In reaction to the classical teacher-centred approach, new methods aim to enhance knowledge acquisition by more actively involving students in their learning, thus achieving greater motivation and commitment (Chi and Wylie, 2014).
